

At the end of the lesson, the student will be able to:

* use polite expressions when he/she mistook someone for somebody else as well as how to respond when he/she is mistaken for someone else.

Dialogue

Marie: Excuse me, you wouldn't be Mr. Dave Robertsons, would you?

Stranger: Afraid not. Good luck trying to find him in this crowd.

Marie: Sorry to bother you. But thanks anyway.

Stranger: Wait, could that be him over there...standing in the corner?

Marie: Maybe not. My sister described Dave to me and that man doesn't fit her description. Oh, well I'll ask him. What do I have to lose? Thanks for the help.

Stranger: No Problem. See you around.

Let's Talk

1. Have you had the same experience as Anne?
2. How would you feel about looking for a person in a crowd?
3. What are the proper gestures in your country as you meet the person for the first time?

Vocabulary Expansion

You wouldn't be Dave Robertson, would you?

Afraid not.

Sorry to bother you.

Thanks anyway.

What do I have to lose?

No problem.

You aren't Dave Robertson, are you?

No, I'm sorry.

I'm sorry to disturb you.

Thank you.

Why don't I try?

You're welcome. Don't mention it.

Activity

* Complete the dialogue by filling in the gaps with the best expression.

A: Pardon me Sir ( _____ ) ( _____ ) Professor Hans,
( _____ ) ( _____ )?

B: ( _____ ) Do I look like him? Maybe he is just somewhere.

A: ( _____ ) ( _____ ).

B: Wait he could be that man at the coffee shop.

A: ( _____ ). He doesn't fit the description. Oh!
Anyway, I'll try to ask him. ( _____ )?
