Read the article

Everywhere we go, we always see people sleeping along the streets. This seems to be a problem regardless of the country's economical status. This sight is nerve trembling. The worst fact is, it's increasing from day to day.

What are the possible reasons of this society's disease? There are a lot of several reasons why homelessness is still gripping and gas claws buried regardless of the effort to eradicate it.

First, the housing cost is too high. These individuals can't afford to have the shelter and food at the same time. If they will be given choices between shelter and food, food will always triumph.

Second, problems at home drive children and wives away. Domestic violence is too severe that they run away for comfort and security outside their home, leaving them to be homeless.

Those are just few reasons on the existence of homelessness. How can we break this chain?
