

This world is a hostile place. It is a place where the predator and the prey co-exist. Religious people say “Trust in the Heaven can help us coping with the tight struggle in the society”. Realists say “If your back is against the wall, you have to fight back”.

Hostility is obviously seen in all aspects of our existence. In family, there is sibling rivalry, competition for parents’ attention and even favoritism. In church, hypocrisy is common. Have you heard of the saying “Wolf in sheep’s clothing?” In government, bribery and corruption is rampant. In company, false advertising is everywhere just to be the top notch in the market.

Then how could we survive? Everywhere you go, you are confronted with the collision between good and evil. Can dying be a means of living? How can we die and live at the same time? Selfishness has to die. It is within each one of us. Other people are hurt because we choose to feed our own comfort and benefits. If one tries to spread good deeds then it is just like a seed it will reap another good deed. There we stop the chain of hostility. Survival is possible if one chooses to die.

Conversation Tips:

Giving Opinion:

- In my opinion...
- The way I see it...
- To put it in a nutshell...
- In my point of view...
- If you ask my honest opinion, I believe...

Negating to an opinion:

- I beg to disagree...
- I disagree. I believe that...
- There's a point there but...
- Not necessarily because...
- He is right when he said.... But I also believe that...

Interaction Link:

Do you agree or disagree in the following ideas. Justify your answer.

1. Human being is innately bad and is not capable of rehabilitation?
2. The only way to survive in this world is to know how to play with the game?
3. Evil act starts from selfish nature.
4. Religious people are the only exemption of moral bankruptcy
5. Family is a little heaven here on earth.